

Bernhard Rietbrock

Alvin Lucier's
Reflexive Experimental Aesthetics

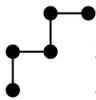

This publication is made possible by

Zürcher Hochschule der Künste
and Schweizerischer Nationalfonds

Z

hdk

Zürcher Hochschule der Künste
Zurich University of the Arts

Swiss National Science Foundation

first edition

simultaneously dissertation to complete a doctorate at the Music Department of the Berlin University of the Arts

© Bernhard Rietbrock

all rights reserved

Wolke Verlag Hofheim, 2022

cover: Friedwalt Donner, Alonissos

using a photograph of Alvin Lucier at Brandeis Studios 1969, private archive of Alvin Lucier

ISBN 978-3-95593-139-1

www.wolke-verlag.de

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	13
American experimental music · Reflexive experimental aesthetics · Lucier and the real · Methodology and approach · State of research · I Am Sitting in a Room (1970) · On the reception of other works by Lucier · Summary of content
1 1931–1950: The Early Years	45
1.1 Parents and Childhood.....	45
Music and the Lucier family · Refusal to play the piano · Drums
1.2 School and Music	48
Jazz, school band and choir · Classical music · Experiences in the natural world
1.3 1949–1950: Preparatory School.....	51
Portsmouth Abbey School
2 An aesthetic foundation	55
2.1 1950–1954: Bachelor of Arts
Studying Composition at the College of Yale University	55
Dropping out of law school after one semester · Howard Boatwright and Bruce Simonds · Drums Yale Marching Band and the New Haven Symphonic Pop Series · Studying composition with Richard Donovan and David Kraehenbuehl · John Cage and Charles Ives · Partita for Flute, Harpsichord and Strings (1954) and the beginning of his first crisis
2.2 1954–1958: The Interim Years	60
1954–56: School of Music dropout · 1956–58: Jobs
2.3 1958–1960: Master’s Studies at Brandeis University and Attendance at Tanglewood Music School.....	61
Brandeis University · Tanglewood Music Center
3 1960–1965: The Transition to Live Electronics	65
3.1 Summer 1960 in Venice	65
Federico Ghedini, Luigi Nono and the Biennale · The John Cage Concert at Teatro La Fenice, Venice, 1960
3.2 1960–1962: Rome	70
Frederic Rzewski, Goffredo Petrassi and Boris Porena · David Tudor’s piano class and concert, Darmstadt Summer Course, 1961 · Studio di Fonologia in Milan

3.2	Rupture, New Start and Interim Compositions.....	75
	Action Music (1962)
3.3	Brandeis University Chamber Chorus.....	78
	Morton Feldman and Earle Brown concert at New York City Town Hall, 1963 ·
	Extended Voices recordings, 1967 · Rose Art Museum Concert Series, 1962–1969
	· Tudor's table of electronics
4	Music for Solo Performer (1965).....	87
4.1	Story of Its Origins	87
	Performance form · Premiere · Aesthetic consequences
4.2	Lucier and the Real	98
	Excursus: The real · Artist or scientist · Christian Scheib and the noise of the real ·
	The postmodern real
5	1965–1972: Live Electronics I.....	111
5.1	Sonic Arts Union, 1966–1977	111
	Sonic Arts Union concerts · Henri Pousseur, Liège · A scandalous concert in Zagreb
5.2	Works That Explore Natural or Architectural Spaces.....	116
	Vespers (1968) · Repercussions · Space as a real-time score and dealing with the impossible · Chambers (1968)
5.3	I Am Sitting in a Room (1970).....	124
	I Am Sitting in a Room and Steve Reich's Come Out (1966) · Gradual processes, American experimental music and the nature of things · The beauty of things · At the boundaries of the symbolic · The insistent real · The real and the horror
5.4	North American Time Capsule (1967)	138
	Fragmentary de-symbolization
6	1972–1982: Live Electronics II	143
6.1	Aesthetic contextualization	143
	Wesleyan University · The subtle difference from electronic music · Demarcation from world music · Demarcation from Western avant-garde · The Ojai letter and Pierre Boulez · Joan Peysner and Boulez
6.2	Sine Tone Compositions.....	156
	Artistic focus · Forms of three-dimensionality of sound · Site-specific improvisation
6.3	Sine Tone Installations	163
	Music for Pure Waves, Bass Drums and Acoustic Pendulums (1980) · Music on a Long Thin Wire (1977) · Sound on Paper (1985) · Demarcation from Cage
6.4	The Passion for the Real	171
	Cage and the passion for the real of purification · Feldman and the passion for the real of subtraction · Lucier and the passion for the real of minimal difference

7	1982–2021: Instrumental Works.....	179
7.1	Second Turning Point	179
	The notation of the beating · Crossings (1982–1984) · Stage layout, excerpt from the score and description of Crossings · On minimal differences as the immanently impossible · The impossible as performative real · Forms of beating · Visual templates · Panorama (1993) · Two Circles (2012) adaptation for four electric guitars, two saxophones, four violins and piano · Braid (2012) adaptation for four electric guitars and three saxophones · Semicircle (2017) for four electric guitars, three alto saxophones, four violins and piano · Tilted Arc (2018) for four electric guitars, three soprano saxophones, four violins, piano and solo bowed glockenspiel · Arrigoni Bridge (2019) for 3 electric guitars, saxophone, violin and cello · The performance of beatings
7.2	In Memoriam Jon Higgins (1984)	207
	In Memoriam Jon Higgins and the positive-medial real · Criss-Cross (2013) the “Beating Microscope”
7.3	Consequences of the Passion for the Real of the Twentieth Century.....	212
	The event as process · The price of the new · The negation of the negation · Summary
8	Table of Figures	227
9	Bibliography	229
10	Catalog of Works.....	241
11	Discography	271

Acknowledgements

This work would not have been possible without the support of many people and several institutions.

Particular gratitude for their consistent motivation, numerous discussions and sustained suggestions and ideas for improvement is due first and foremost to my supervisors and reviewers Prof. Dr. Dörte Schmidt, Prof. Dr. Sabine Sanio, and Prof. Dr. Dieter Mersch.

There is no way to adequately express my thanks to Prof. Dr. Dörte Schmidt, as she enabled the realization of this project at the music department of the Berlin University of the Arts in the first place, and contributed in an essential way to the project's success with her extremely scrupulous and profound remarks from a musicological perspective. I would like to explicitly personally thank Prof. Dr. Sabine Sanio as well, since without her experienced, thoughtful, and vigorous counsel, I would have been completely lost with this research work. And since, without his unparalleled openness, it would have become impossible for this undertaking, with all its side projects, to become what it is, I also cannot express enough gratitude to Prof. Dr. Dieter Mersch, particularly for complementary perspectives from philosophy.

When, over a coffee in Berlin, Prof. Dr. Helga de la Motte-Haber proposed that I take up Alvin Lucier as the topic for my dissertation, it was by no means evident what a splendid voyage of discovery would result. Accordingly, I am forever deeply in her debt.

I owe many suggestions and positive interest to the participants in the musicological research colloquium at the Berlin University of the Arts, as well as my colleagues Jan Thoben and Volker Straebel in the Das Hören des Anderen – Zur Ästhetik des Realen in experimenteller Musik und Klangkunst D-A-CH project (Germany / Austria / Switzerland project: Hearing the Other – on the Aesthetics of the Real in Experimental Music and Sound Art), in which, led by Prof. Dr. Sabine Sanio, insights and questions resulting from this work were pursued on a broader basis.

Special thanks is due once again to Jan Thoben, together with Alvin Lucier's assistant Trevor Saint, for their active collaboration and support in realizing the many side projects and follow-up projects, such as the Ever Present Orchestra and associated concerts and record releases.

An explicit thank you is due here to Katrin Stowasser, coordinator of the Institute for Theory at the Zurich University of the Arts (ZHdK), which was headed up by Prof. Dr. Dieter Mersch, for her highly reliable support with all kinds of questions and problems, relating in particular to the Alvin Lucier 85th Birthday Festival which we hosted at the Zurich University of the Arts in the scope of the reflexive experimental aesthetics after Alvin Lucier SNF research project.

I received financial support from the SNF in the scope of the reflexive experimental aesthetics after Alvin Lucier SNF research project and from the Zurich Academy of Arts, making possible numerous events where I was able to present and discuss particular aspects of my work, but also got to know Lucier himself and the research landscape. The translation and the publication in Gold Open Access of this thesis were supported by the Zurich University of the Arts. Thus, I would like to sincerely thank both institutions.

All of this would of course not have been conceivable under any circumstances had Alvin Lucier not stood at the center of all these activities. That so many outstanding and diverse personalities were willing, without hesitating for a second, to support this dissertation and the music and book projects resulting from working on it in a number of ways, underscores not only the immense significance of his musical work, but also the charisma of his mesmerizing and utterly charming character. I will eternally be grateful for his commitment and openness, as well as his support in founding and naming the Ever Present Orchestra which emerged from the Festival, the numerous joint concerts, and the many works composed for the orchestra and its members. I would like as well to warmly thank his widow Wendy Stokes for her open hospitality and generous support of many enquiries and follow-up projects.

Similar thanks is due to Amadeus Johannes Kramer and Karl Ludwig for their conscientious editing, as well as Nancy Chapple and Lee Holt for the sensitive translation of the English edition. I was by no means aware to this extent of the elementary significance both have for the quality and success of such a publication, and I am deeply impressed by the high level of the present results.

I thank my friends for their support, their sympathetic interest, motivation, and understanding in all phases of the work. I would particularly like to thank all members of the Ever Present Orchestra, as well as, last but not least, my family, particularly Ellen, Lilly and Henry, who sustained and supported me through all the ups and downs that such a protracted and challenging activity entails.

I dedicate this book to my father Dr. med. vet. Werner Rietbrock, who unfortunately did not live to see its publication.

Many thanks to everyone, I appreciate it very much!

Bernhard Rietbrock